The Office of Graduate Student Services combines graduate academic advising, international education, and career development to help students plan their studies for their future career. It is dedicated to providing guidance throughout a graduate student's tenure at the Elliott School and worldwide career opportunities to current graduate students, graduate alumni, and prospective employers.

As a graduate student in the Elliott School, you will be assigned two advisors who will oversee different aspects of your program:

Program Director: Assigned by degree program; responsible for the content of the core and concentration portions of your program

Academic Advisor: Assigned by degree program; responsible for helping you understand the curriculum, Elliott School and GW policies and procedures, and track your progress toward degree completion.

Learning Outcomes:
Academic advising is a process which includes intentional interactions between a student and an academic advisor centered on student learning outcomes designed to encourage the student’s self-efficacy and development of meaningful educational and professional goals.

- National Academic Advising Association (NACADA)

Through the academic advising process Elliott School graduate students are expected to achieve the following learning outcomes:

- Assess their personal and professional interests.
- Assess their academic abilities.
- Create an academic plan that fulfills all University and program requirements.
- Develop specific, measurable, actionable, realistic, and timely (SMART) goals.
- Identify and utilize appropriate campus resources as needed.
