Elliott School Service Commendations and Awards

Maggie Xiaoyang Chen—Recognition of Service in gratitude for her outstanding performance and lasting contributions as Director of Institute for International Economic Policy, 2017-2019.

Marlene Laruelle—2019 Michael E. Brown Research Prize

The Elliott School of International Affairs is proud to award Research Professor of International Affairs Marlene Laruelle the 2019 Michael E. Brown Research Prize. Established in 2015 and awarded by the Elliott School faculty, this annual prize recognizes a faculty member who has made an outstanding contribution to the scholarly and policy relevant understanding of one or more important international issues.

While serving as Research Professor of International Affairs, Director of the Central Asia Program, Co-director of the Project on New Approaches to Research and Security (PONARS) Eurasia, and Associate Director of the Institute for European, Russian, and Eurasian Studies (IERES), Marlene has produced influential research and publications at a remarkable pace. Her colleagues spare no praise in describing her accomplishments. She is, according to IERES Director Peter Rollberg, “a researcher of enormous productivity and versatility, an internationally recognized expert in fields as diverse as Russian nationalism, Central Asia, and the Arctic; moreover, she is known as a wonderful colleague who generously shares her resources with researchers from around the world, as well as undergraduate and graduate students.”

Professors Hope Harrison and Henry Hale echo this praise noting, “Marlene Laruelle's prolific, interdisciplinary and influential scholarship on nationalism, culture, politics, and history in Eurasia has won her acclaim from scholars, policymakers, and funders.” She is, in short, a scholar, a leader, and a most deserving recipient of the Michael E. Brown Research Prize.

The George Washington University has educated generations of international leaders and advanced the understanding of important global issues since 1821. The Elliott School of International Affairs, named in honor of former GW President Lloyd H. Elliott and his wife Evelyn, is dedicated to this mission.

We train our students in the theory and practice of international affairs, offering them in-depth analysis of international economic, political, scientific and cultural issues. The School's curriculum is interdisciplinary; most Elliott School full-time faculty are jointly appointed in GW departments. Our widely respected faculty prepares Elliott School students for global careers in the public, private and non-profit sectors. Elliott School graduates are consistently sought after for challenging global careers. What's more, our Washington, DC location allows us to form strong relationships with public, private, and non-profit organizations that regularly employ Elliott School students and alumni.
